Singapore Medical Journal Best Research Paper Award 2019

A/Prof Mythily Subramaniam's article entitled "Successful ageing in Singapore: prevalence and correlates from a national survey of older adults" has been selected as one of the top three original research papers published in the Singapore Medical Journal in 2019.

Her paper was selected for its potential impact on clinical practice, rigorous study design/research methodology, comprehensive data analysis, balanced discussion and quality of data interpretation.

"It was a pleasant surprise to be awarded the SMJ Best Research paper award. As Singapore faces the challenges of an ageing population, it is important to remember that older adults age successfully and contribute meaningfully to families and the society. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the older adults who participated in the Wellbeing of the Singapore Elderly study and contributed their valuable time to make this challenging study a success".
